Five Arkansans Injured in Train Accident

GORHAM, Ill. (UP) — At least 13 passengers on a Cotton Belt Line train were injured early today when the southbound passenger train was "sideswiped" by a diesel freight near here.

The injured were taken to hospitals in Murphysboro and Chester. None was reported in serious condition.

Officials of the Cotton Belt Line said there were only 27 passengers on the train when the accident occurred.

They said the freight sideswiped the second baggage car as the trains were passing, then bounced against a mail and express car and two coaches.

Jackson County Deputy Sheriff Ray Varner said three diesel units pulling the 110-car freight were derailed. He said there was considerable damage to equipment, but the passenger train was expected to resume its scheduled run "in a few hours."

Railroad officials said an investigation was underway to determine responsibility for the accident.

At least nine of the injured were hospitalized at St. Andrew's Hospital, Murphysboro. They were: Mrs. Floyd Saul, 43, Stuttgart, Ark., probable broken leg and shock.

Archie Wade, 65, Jonesboro, Ark., cuts and bruises left arm and leg.

Mrs. Frank Popler, 65, Stuttgart, Ark., injury to right chest.

Miss Alice McKelvey, 25, Pine Bluff, Ark., neck injury.

$250,000 Industrial Drive Is Launched Here

The campaign to raise a $250,000 industrial fund in Hempstead county was launched last night in an address by Attorney C. V. Nunn Jr., at a dinner meeting of the Hope Junior Chamber of Commerce at Hotel Barlow.

Mr. Nunn was selected as the leadoff speaker in a series of meetings to be held in Hope this week in which the fund-raising campaign will be discussed.

Chancery Judge James H. Pilkinton is slated to deliver an address today at the noon meeting of the Hope Kiwanis Club. He will be followed by Circuit Judge Lyle Brown who speaks before Hope Rotary Club Friday.

Dr. Sam Strong will bring the campaign to the Hope Lions Club next Monday.

Time for action.

Mr. Nunn told the Junior Chamber of Commerce last night the time had come for action on the part of every civic-minded person in Hope and Hempstead county who desires a better and more prosperous community in which to live and to raise their families.

Plans for raising the $250,000 Hempstead County Industrial Foundation fund have been carefully studied for a number of months by many business and professional men of Hope and briefly here is the plan:

1. A finance committee has been selected to determine the amount that each business firm, corporation or individual can pledge toward and pay toward this $250,000 fund. This committee is expected to go into action as soon as the series of meetings are completed.
2. Business firms will be called in by groups, for example the automobile dealers may be the first group. Each dealer's contribution will be determined and the firm called upon to pay 10 percent down and 10 percent each year for the next nine years. The entire pledge however, may be paid at once, if it is the desire of the firm to do so.
3. The industrial foundation fund will be used for two purposes, to bring in new industrial concerns and for the expansion of local industry. The money would be used for construction purposes, such as the erection of buildings. This money would be repaid to the foundation on a monthly basis.

Girard Guilty, Sentence Is Suspended

By GENE KRAMER

MAEBASHI, Japan (AP) — GI William S. Girard was convicted today of shooting down a woman scrap collector to satisfy a "vengeful caprice." A three-judge Japanese court gave him a three-year suspended prison sentence and put him on probation for a fourth year.

Girard called the verdict after the three-month trial "kind of tough" but said he was glad the court "gave me another chance."

The 22-year-old soldier from Ottawa, Ill., and his Japanese bride are scheduled to leave for the United States quickly if neither prosecution nor defense appeals the verdict during the next 14 days.

The court said the probationary period would apply only if he remained in Japan. Girard also was ordered to pay the court costs of the Japanese witnesses, about $20.

Chief defense attorney Ituro Hayashi said the defense does not intend to appeal unless the prosecution does. A prosecution spokesman indicated his side also would not challenge the court ruling, saying, "We are happy that all our contentions were accepted."

The prosecutors had asked for a five-year sentence, which would have meant a permanent ban on Japanese citizenship.

Girard, a specialist third class, told a news conference he would like to re-enlist when his term expires Jan. 27. An Army spokesman said any re-enlistment application would be judged on its merits, although conviction for a felony normally rules out an applicant.

U. S. officials said a visa application for Girard's wife, Haru (Candy), "is being processed normally and we see no complications."

French Envoy Would Limit Tunisia Arms

WASHINGTON (AP) — French Foreign Minister Christian Pineau appeals directly to the U. S. government today to limit Tunisian arms to one gun per soldier lest any surplus be smuggled to Algerian rebels.

Pineau told reporters on arrival in Washington last night that was the main purpose of his flight from Paris.

He said such restrictions might "limit the damage" he contends was caused by U. S.-British shipments of weapons to Tunisia last week despite bitter French protests.

Pineau said the arms shipments harmed Atlantic solidarity at the very moment efforts were being made to reinforce it.

Dulles scheduled a late afternoon appointment with Pineau, taking time out from consideration of plans to revitalize the Western alliance in the face of Russia's new scientific advances.

Pineau said any stockpiling of surplus guns by Tunisia might let some weapons get across the border to Algeria, where France has been battling Arab rebels for years.

He expressed doubt that Tunisia's President, Habib Bourguiba, could control any surplus. He said the ratio should be 4,000 rifles for the 4,000 Tunisian soldiers—and no stockpile.

The United States and Britain agreed early this year to encourage France to work out an arms arrangement with Bourguiba. They shipped a token allotment of about 1,000 rifles, submachine and Bren guns and ammunition last week. The decision to do that was made after it appeared Egypt was about to be first in providing Bourguiba with non-French weapons.

Lions Hear About Youth Activities

Hope Lions Club met yesterday noon for its regular weekly luncheon and business meeting at the Hotel Barlow.

Charles Gough was in charge of the program and presented Cary Castle, president of the Hope Youth Center and Dennis Paddle, vice president, who gave an informal talk on youth activities in Hope and at the Youth Center.

Lion Gough completed the program by holding a question and answer period with the club.

The club voted to have a Christmas Party this year in lieu of a noon meeting. There were 43 members present and three guests, Ralph Saunders, Cary Castle and Dennis Paddle.

French Envoy Would Limit Tunisia Arms

WASHINGTON (AP) — House investigators put together today some questions about whether President Eisenhower muzzled the military on public discussion of satellite programs.

A subcommittee looking into government "information" practices recalled Murray Snyder, assistant secretary of defense for public information, to ask about that and other matters.

What evoked this line of inquiry was a communication Oct. 9, five days after Russia fired its first Sputnik into space, from one undersecretary of the Air Force to another. It said: "President desires that Air Force personnel refrain from making public comment on the satellite program of the United States and other countries."

A copy of the memo, made available to newsmen by the subcommittee staff, showed that it was sent by Harold M. Helfman, deputy director of the Office of Information Services at headquarters of the Air Research and Development Command in Baltimore. It went to the commander of the Air Force ballistic missile development center at Ingleside, Calif.

What the subcommittee wants to know is whether Helfman or Continued on Page Three

Algerian Rebels Shoot Up Hotel

PARIS (AP) — Algerian nationalist gunmen shot up a small suburban workers hotel early today, killing six Moslems and wounding two more. Since the beginning of this year more than 550 Algerians in France have been killed in warfare between rival North African nationalist groups.

Pentagon Denies Muzzle Placed on Missile Talk

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon's information chief disclaimed today any knowledge of whether President Eisenhower had issued orders forbidding public discussion of satellites by the armed forces immediately after Russia launched its first Sputnik.

A House subcommittee investigating government information practices and policies asked Murray Snyder whether he knew of any instructions or advice from the White House National Security Council or Operations Coordinating Board forbidding military personnel to comment on the satellite program of this or other countries.

"I have no knowledge of any such instruction," Snyder said. Furthermore, the assistant secretary of defense for public information said he had proposed censure for an under-official of the Air Force who messaged another such official on Oct. 9 that: "The President desires that Air Force personnel refrain from making public comment on the satellite program of the United States and other countries."

No More Apples for the Teacher

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Competition in gift giving has caused school officials in a Rochester suburb to rule that there are to be no more apples for teachers.

The principals of the 13 schools in the West Irondequoit School District said in a letter to parents, "In the last few years, the monetary value of gifts to teachers by pupils has increased to a point where a problem has been created."

"Since children are required by law to attend school, it is our feeling that they should not be subjected to competition in the presentation of gifts to the teachers."

UN Disarmament Talks Head for Complete Collapse

By MAX HARELSON

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) — U. N. disarmament talks appeared today to be headed for a complete breakdown as the Soviet bloc formally demanded that Communist and neutral countries be given more representation in future negotiations.

The new move came after Soviet delegates had announced their rejection of a compromise plan to add 14 new members to the U. N. Disarmament Commission, bringing its total membership to 25.

An Albanian amendment, submitted this morning, proposed the addition of seven more countries. Western sources immediately declared the Albanian proposal unacceptable.

Despite Soviet threats to boycott future talks unless the Assembly accepted Russian terms for enlarging the commission, the Western nations pushed ahead for a vote.

One high Western source expressed the belief that it was useless to try further to prevent a Soviet boycott. This source said the Soviet Union apparently had decided to break off the talks no matter what the West agreed to.

The new countries proposed by the Soviet bloc were Austria, Bulgaria, Indonesia, Romania, Sudan, Finland and Ceylon.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister V. V. Kuznetsov told newsmen the enlarge group proposed by the West would be stacked at least 16-9 against Russia. He demanded that at least half the members of any such group be Communist or neutralist.

Prospects were uncertain for the Western plan, conceived to keep the Russians from carrying out their threat to boycott the disarmament talks.

The Soviets let it be known they planned to seek a prior vote on their earlier demand to balloon out the arms negotiations to include all 82 U. N. members. The West has regarded this as a Soviet bluff for bargaining purposes. Initial U. S. reaction to Kuznetsov's latest rejection was that it was a similar bluff.

Kuznetsov conceded that Russia would accept less than all 82 nations. But he said either the proposed 25-nation commission must be expanded to provide seven more Communist or neutralist, or some "Western bloc" countries must be subtracted to provide a balance.

Faubus Calls for Release of All Guards First

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — News that the Army is planning to withdraw all remaining regular troops from Little Rock before Thanksgiving drew today from Gov. Orval Faubus a declaration that the federalized Arkansas National Guard should be relieved first.

At Shreveport, La., where he had gone to address a meeting of the Shreveport News Club, Faubus said that members of the guard "did not enlist to enforce integration, but enlisted to defend their country in time of need."

Faubus could not be reached for comment when it was first learned yesterday that the Army planned to send back to Ft. Campbell, Ky., the remaining paratroopers who have enforced court-ordered integration of nine Negro students at Little Rock Central High School.

He made today's comment after the Army had officially confirmed the pending withdrawal and said the paratroopers would depart on Nov. 27, the day before Thanksgiving.

Butcher Slayer to Take a Lie Detector Test

by DION HENDERSON

WATONIA, Wis. (AP) — A different little man who admitted in puzzled tones yesterday that he had opened fresh graves over a period of years to collect human heads and finally butchered a neighbor woman — "while in a daze-like" — faces a polygraph test of his story.

Edward Gein, a 51-year-old Plainfield bachelor handyman, is scheduled to go to Madison today for a lie detector test at the state crime laboratory.

He is being held under $10,000 bond for the armed robbery of Mrs. Bernice Worden last Saturday.

Dist. Atty. Earl Kileen said the filing of a murder charge in the death of the 58-year-old widow, whose dismembered corpse was found hanging like a deer carcass in Gein's wooded Saturday night. Awaiting only a complete sifting of the gruesome remnants found on his secluded farm, about 20 miles northwest of Milwaukee.

Here are some of the questions the lie detector test may answer:

Did Gein mould hideous death masks from the faces of new-buried dead?

Did he fabricate upholstery for furniture in his cluttered farm house from human skin?

Did he intend to eat the eye victim he admits killing, the one of whom he said, almost apologetically, "I am not too sure that I killed her?"

"That is what I can't remember," Gein said in a question-and-answer session with Wausau county officers.

A "daze," he said, came on him when he did such things as dig up the graves from which he took at least 10 heads.

Once, he said, the daze left him while he was digging in a burial mound.

"I quit then," he said.

Investigators, who found Mrs. Worden's decapitated corpse, discovered the heads of four other persons in Gein's house Sunday.

Floods Receding in Italian Delta

HOVICO, Italy (AP)—Floodwaters were slowly receding today from 28,000 acres of farm land and more than 20 villages in the Po River delta.

Authorities estimated it would take six or seven months to drain the flooded area completely.

The Po, Italy's mightiest river, spread over its banks in the delta last week after seven days of steady rainfall all along its course. At the same time high tides in the Adriatic breached the protective dike along the coast.

About 1,000 refugees fled to inland centers. Damage to farmland was reported this year. A 30-year-old man died of a heart attack while working on a dike.

New Financing Law
Mr. Nunn pointed out in the 1957 legislation, local participation in financing would be only 25 percent, 37 1/2 percent in the form of a loan from the state and the other 37 1/2 percent raised through bond sales or financing from insurance companies.

Thus, Mr. Nunn pointed out that if an industrial firm needed $100,000 for a new building, the Hempstead County Industrial Foundation would be required to furnish only $25,000.

However, Mr. Nunn explained that if Hope should be lucky enough to land a plant needing a building costing $1,000,000 then all of the $250,000 industrial fund would be needed at once as a "showdown" would be at hand.

Ready for Action
Mr. Nunn emphasized the necessity to be prepared for action when opportunity presented itself. We have all read in the newspapers about new industry locating in various sections of our state.

A number of these new industries are going to towns which have a plan and are immediately ready to act, and that's why it is so important to plan for industry and be ready when opportunity knocks, otherwise many industrialists are by-passing the towns which have no plan, no industrial fund, no industrial site.

A town that "seems to sleep" will not be disturbed by industrialists in this modern age, Mr. Nunn concluded.

and found six more three yesterday. Some were packaged neatly in plastic bags others were tossed under furniture.

In a signed statement, Gein said he had not "collected any for two or three years."

Kileen said Gein took him to cemeteries he had visited.

At Madison last night, Charles Wilson, state crime laboratory director, said that when all the human segments had been collected from Gein's farm technicians would study them in an effort to identify the victims of the grave robberies.

Gein said he had followed death notices published in the local news paper and then opened the graves from 1944 to 1952. He indicated that on other occasions he snapped out of his "daze" and went home without violating a grave.

In his statement, Gein recalled visiting the Worden hardware store Saturday morning and paying 99 cents for some antifreeze. He also remembered transporting Mrs. Worden's body to his farm home.

Asked whether he remembered killing her, he said, "No, that is what I can't remember; my memory is a little vague."

Gein said that he did remember hanging the body from its heels in the shed and butchering it "because I thought I was dressing out a deer."

In the statement he said, "That is as close as I can remember. I was in a regular daze-like and I can't swear to it."

Rep. Brooks Hays (D-Ark) called the report that paratroopers will be withdrawn "good news." He said he was happy to learn "the situation is such that they can leave this enforcement to local authorities."

T. A. Dillaha, vice president of the Capital Citizens Council, said it was "mighty nice of the Army" to let the paratroopers go home for Thanksgiving dinner.

"I wish they'd let all of them go home instead of staying around to guard nine niggers," Dillaha said.

Under the plan worked out by the Army selected members of the 153th Arkansas National Guard Regiment will assume responsibility for enforcing court-ordered integration. Maj. Gen. Edwin Walker, head of the Arkansas Military District, will remain in command.

The tentative date of departure for 101st Airborne Division units is Nov. 20. About 1,000 paratroopers arrived here Sept. 24. Their numbers have been reduced twice and about 225 remain.

The Thanksgiving week is believed to have been chosen for the withdrawal of the last contingent of paratroopers because there will be a short school holiday — and because of the nature of national observance of Thanksgiving.

The Army announcement setting forth these decisions has reportedly received White House approval and now is being co-ordinated in various Pentagon agencies.

somebody else was responsible for orders going out saying that the President wanted Air Force people not to talk about satellites.

The subcommittee has had word from the Air Force that, along with a message by wire restricting public comment, verbal instructions were issued last Oct. 9 to each major command information services officer in the country. The Air Force said these emphasized that the Air Force "did not want any self-appointed experts adding to the confusion and speculation on the satellite matter."

Each of the three military services had taken similar steps but Snyder, in response to a letter from Committee Chairman Moss (D-Calif.), said in a Nov. letter: "No verbal or written instructions to issue the communications, to which you refer, were given by the secretary of defense or by myself in his behalf."

Snyder appeared briefly as a witness yesterday after a former Pentagon official testified that official regulations have been "hampering the progress of the ballistic missile program."

That comment came from Trevor.

Suit by Negro Group Reinstated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today reinstated a suit by four Houston Negroes who charged their railroad union discriminated against them. The Negroes contended the union favored white workers when the Texas & New Orleans Railroad ordered a cut in the working force.

The Negroes sought injunctions and $75,000 damages from locals of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees. The U. S. District Court in Houston dismissed their suit on a holding that the Railway Labor Act left the court without jurisdiction.

Justice Black delivered the unanimous decision.

The litigation resulted from the railroad's action in 1954 in abolishing 45 jobs. J. D. Conley, Stanley Moore Sr., George L. Carter and A. Watson, Negro employees at the Houston freight house operated by the railroad said they believed only those jobs held by Negroes were abolished.

The four charged many white men were hired to fill the jobs and later some Negroes were rehired, but without seniority.

Opposing the Negroes' contention.

DOROTHY DIX

If Love Is Dead Forget the Altar

Dear Dorothy Dix: I realize that a man who wants to break his engagement to a beautiful, intelligent girl is a heel — and probably witless, but that's what I want to do. After knowing Diane for six years and being engaged for three, I realize that I don't love her. There's no one else, but Diane simply doesn't hold for me. I know I want in a wife. I know she'll be hurt by my decision, but won't I hurt her more by marrying her unwillingly? JONNIE

Dear Jonnie: The most mistaken gesture of gallantry a man can make is to marry a girl he has ceased to love. Diane will have a few bad moments — every jilted girl has them, but they'll be nothing compared to the misery she would endure as the wife of a husband who doesn't love her. You too, will face an unhappy time when you tell her everything is over, but if you're a man, you'll face up to it.

It takes a lot of love to make marriage endure, to make the sacrifices worth-while, and to make allowances for each other's faults and weaknesses. Without that love, nothing else matters. So, as you realize that a marriage with Diane would be loveless on your part, write this to the romance.

My leaflet "Broken Romances," may shed further light on the problem. If interested, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me for it.

Dear Dorothy Dix: My husband's obsession is thrift and he seems to think the only way to save is to have leftovers. He sits down to a well-planned meal, and wants to know what's in the refrigerator from last night. We have two healthy, hungry boys and there rarely are leftovers. KAY

Dear Kay: Give Dad his full of leftovers. Cook enough on Saturday to last the week. Drag out the same tired food every night and by Wednesday he'll be yelling for mercy. Some men aren't happy unless they have something to complain about even if it's a man-fabricated gripe.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Women often write you complaining that their husbands don't say "I love you" often enough. I have the same complaint, but my husband is a good father and provider, he comes home each night, brings his pay home (all of it), doesn't drink, swear or gamble. He bitches in with the housework and helps with our four youngsters when he knows I need it or don't feel well. I'm no beauty as far as looks go, but he thinks I'm pretty. So, I read between the lines and know that every action of his says, "I love you."

Dear H. W.: I hope your letter will bring sense to many women who have no complaint in life but the fact that their husbands aren't demonstrative.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Do you think it is all right to neck while on a highway or party? If you do not approve, what do you suggest that teenagers do instead? TEENIE

Dear Teenie: I don't like to be a party pooper, but you asked me! The answer is, "No, it is not proper!" A brisk conversation would be safer.

Send your problem to DOROTHY DIX. Be sure to enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope, and address her care of this newspaper.

Guam Starts Cleanup After Typhoon

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP)—Typhoon Lola whirled toward Formosa today, as storm-lashed Guam went about cleanup and repair operations.

The typhoon's center winds slowed from 200 to 150 miles an hour as Lola moved northwestward at seven to nine miles an hour.

The eye of the storm, at mid-afternoon was about 1,000 miles southeast of Taipei. The island would be struck in about five days if the typhoon continues on its present course and at the present speed.

Guam was raked Friday night and property damage was estimated at more than a million dollars. There were no casualties.

the union locals said the Houston court lacked authority to act because Congress had given the National Railroad Adjustment board jurisdiction over cases involving application of working agreements.

Rare Serum Rushed to Arkansas Victim

HOPE, Ark. — A scarce serum, rushed here by state troopers, has temporarily relieved a Malvern girl ill with a rare disease, but her physician says more serum is needed immediately. Aileen Loutin, 14, has been hospitalized for nearly a week because of a disease which causes her to hemorrhage from the calves of her legs.

Units of the serum, a recent discovery, were located at University Medical Center in Little Rock and wholesale drug firm in Fort Smith during the weekend.

THE STORY: Private investigator Jim Bennett receives orders from his agency to contact a prospective client named Hugo Howell. At an inn on Lake Erie where Jim receives the message, he has already had trouble with a quip, reformed man named Hugo.

CHAPTER II

I became suddenly aware that the people in the place had stopped talking, and that the room was very quiet.

I said to the fat man, "Are you Hugo Howell?"

He nodded, watching me. "That's me. What of it?"

"I'd like to talk to you — privately."

Behind him the pale man, still sitting in the stool, gazed at his fingernails and murmured, "Go ahead Hugo. You can handle him."

"I'll settle it here," Howell blurted. He flung himself toward me, and his right fist started upward from his hip.

I jumped for him, got one thick hairy wrist in my fingers, twisted his arm behind him and held him against the bar. "Stop it," I said in a low voice. "Sober up. I want to talk to you."

Instead, he crouched down low, showing yellow teeth. And then he twisted free and came for me.

I had no choice. As he came at me, I hit him on the jaw with my right fist, putting some shoulder weight behind it. My knuckles stung, and the blow staggered him. He rocked back on his heels, stumbled against a bar stool and leaned over it, his eyes squeezed shut. I felt a little sorry for him; I'm almost 40 years old, but he was at least 20 years my senior, and overweight at that. I wasn't proud of myself.

Otto cleared the end of the bar and long strides took him to Howell. He leaped down, grasped him under the arms and pulled him to his feet. Howell stood groggily, his eyes blurred and bewildered.

A little man in a white suit danced around and cried over and over in a shrill voice, "Here, here, we can't have this sort of thing!" Otto led Howell toward the rear stairs leading up from the bar to the upper floor of the hotel. The pale man followed them. He did not look back to where I stood by the bar rubbing my knuckles.

The man in the white suit the hotel manager, I learned later.

Rock and Fort Smith delivered the serum to Trooper Glen Minton of Hot Springs at rendezvous points near here.

But the serum already delivered is not enough, the girl's physician said yesterday, and she will have to be flown to St. Louis immediately for further treatment unless additional serum can be found.

lifted his arms and said soothingly, "It's all right folks. Please sit down."

I decided I'd better get out of there but a big young policeman in a blue shirt and a Sam Browne belt came in from the street entrance and slapped a heavy palm on my chest. "Stick around, Mac," he grunted. I stopped and stuck around.

The pale man turned, saw the policeman and came back down the stairs and over to us and pointed a fat white finger at me. "Arrest him, officer. He started it. I saw it all."

The young policeman grunted again, slapped at my clothes, flipped back my coat and lifted my snub-nosed .38 Special from the inside pocket. "Hm," he said, hefting the gun and eyeing me narrowly. Then he released the cylinder with a broad thumb, squinted at the five bright cartridges, clicked the cylinder shut, said "Huh-huh," and stuck the gun into a hip pocket.

I said "Listen, officer—"

"Shut up," he snapped, and his gaze went to the stair where Otto and the man named Howell had stopped to watch what was going on down in the bar. Howell shook his arm loose from Otto's grasp, came slowly and carefully down the steps and weaved up to us.

Otto was right behind him, his eyes bright and alert. Howell pointed a wavering finger at me. "He called me a name," he said thickly. "I was just minding my own business and he called me a hasty name."

The policeman looked at the bartender. "How about it, Otto?"

Otto nodded at me and said quietly, "It was not his fault, Gus. Mr. Howell started it." He gazed at the fat man.

"Thanks, Otto," I murmured, uncomfortably aware that everyone in the place was watching us silently and curiously.

The young cop said sternly "Maybe so, Otto, but this man was carrying a gun. I'll have to take him in."

"Look—" I began.

"Tell it to the chief," he said gruffly. He grasped my arm and started to lead me toward the street entrance. I shot Otto an imploring glance.

Otto said quickly, "You're making a mistake, Gus."

"Maybe," Gus said grimly. "I've made 'em before."

I held back and said "Okay, take me in, but they go along, too." I nodded at Howell and his pale companion.

A soft voice behind me said "Gus this man acted in self-defense. I saw the whole thing."

I planted my feet stubbornly and looked around. The girl standing there was so sun-tanned that at first glance I couldn't tell if she was pretty or not, but she had nice regular features and a figure that would make any man look at least twice.

She was tall, with long legs and a slim waist, with flowing hips and firm rounded shoulders. She wore a clinging white linen dress, sleeveless and almost topless, except for narrow straps over her shoulders — you would call it a sun dress. I suppose. Her hair was brown, with bronze highlights, and was combed severely back from the small flat ears in a pony-tail tied with a red ribbon.

The young policeman grinned at her. "Hello Honey. Your word is good with me — we'll take 'em all to the station. But you come along, too."

The girl laughed. "All right, Gus. That's what I get for butting in."

"Thanks, Miss," I said to her, and turned to Gus. "Thank you can handle us all?"

"Sure Mac. Stay here." He moved to a phone on the end of the bar.

We hit the sidewalk just as a battered black cruiser bearing Police on its side in huge black letters rolled up to the curb. A young cop was behind the wheel. Gus opened the front door and the girl got in beside the driver. I climbed in beside her. For a second, from the expression on Gus' face, I was afraid I wouldn't get away with it. But he decided to let it ride, opened the rear door, motioned to the two men to get in and got in beside them. We started off.

I said to the girl beside me "Does everyone call you Honey?"

She gave me a quick smile. "Yes—you see, that's my name."

Behind us Hugo Howell let out an imitation wolf howl.

"Shut up, you," I heard Gus say sternly. Howell guffawed.

Gus herded us into a long room with brown linoleum on the floor. There were wooden benches along the walls, a bare table in the center surrounded by wooden chairs. On a raised platform at the far end was a desk. On the wall behind the desk hung an American flag and beside the flag was a door. A spare man wearing a dark blue suit, white shirt and black tie sat at the desk. He had white hair, neatly trimmed and combed, a smooth lean tanned face and a thin blade of a nose.

When he saw the girl the corners of his thin mouth twisted upward for an instant. Then the grim mask fell again and his cold gaze swung to Gus. "What do we have here?"

Gus said, "Chief, the charge is disorderly conduct and disturbing the peace, in the Harbor House bar." He nodded at me and Howell. "They was fighting."

The chief's gaze swung to Howell. "What's your name?" he snapped.

"Hugo H. Howell and I'll have your lousy job for this."

"Shut up," the chief said, and nodded at Gus. "Tell me about it."

Gus began to tell him and the chief listened gravely. Hugo Howell muttered under his breath and swayed against the pale man, who supported him as best he could.

I heard Gus say, "... and he had a gun, Chief." I saw that he'd placed my gun on the desk.

"Very well," the chief said quietly. "Look up Mr. Howell," his thin lips twisted wryly. "Let's call it protective custody. He's in no shape to be on the streets tonight."

The pale man started to protest, but the chief waved a weary hand, and the pale man shut up. Gus took Howell by the arm and led him from the room. A door slammed, and then there was silence.

The chief looked at me, a faint smile cracking his stern features. "Mr. Bennett, will you come with me for a moment?" He stepped back from his desk and opened the door there.

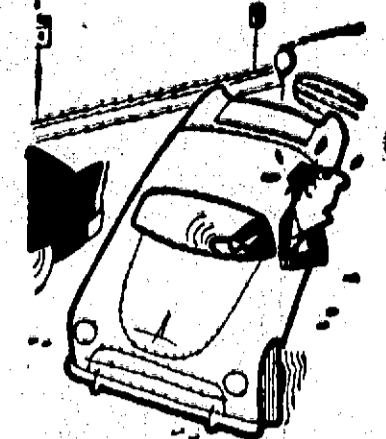

The girl and the pale man watched me curiously as I stepped up to the platform and followed the chief through the door into a small office. He closed the door, turned and held out a hand. "How are you, Bennett? How's your boss?"

I shook his dry, bony hand and mumbled, "We're both fine Chief, but—"

"I used to work for him," he broke in, smiling. "Out on the coast, in the old days, when he was starting the agency. And I recognized you from a picture in one of the Cleveland papers — in connection with that Canfield case. My name is Campbell."

TOO LITTLE, TOO LATE is the way we Dodge dealers feel about competitors' efforts to match the Sweep-Wing 58. They lowered the roof some, but left the sides high. Their windshields got smaller while ours got bigger. So much for styling. Then, for another important comparison, take ride. Here's Dodge with Torque-Air suspension that just about everybody admits is the greatest advance in away-free, dip-free, silent going that any car offers. So what do these other cars do? They borrow an air suspension system that's been used in buses for two years! (Coming well over $100.00 extra.) And most of 'em still don't have push-button driving — much less Dodge TorqueFlite — the proven automatic transmission. If you're a little disappointed in the '58 version of your car, come on in and see our Sweep-Wing 58. The others are catching on — but they can't catch up.

How Texas Eastern helps Tappan "cook with gas"

Tappan gas ranges are modern as tomorrow — from the fuel-saving, thermostatically-controlled burners on top, to the automatic "roast-meter" in the oven below. Time-saving, work-saving, safe, these ranges come encased in tough porcelain that stays gleaming white, cleans easily and lasts — because it's baked on to stay on... with natural gas transported from the Southwest via Texas Eastern's 5900-mile pipeline system.

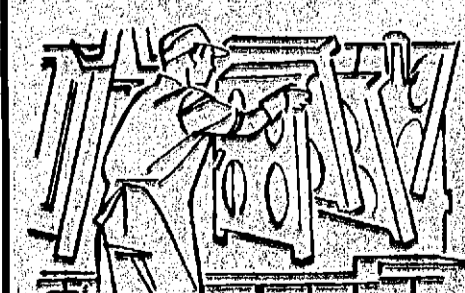

Tappan Stove Company uses natural gas in its Mansfield, Ohio, plant because it's cheaper, dependable, and easily available — the same reasons housewives like gas for their kitchen ranges.
